International Truck To Introduce New Line Of Premium Vocational Trucks As Navistar, Caterpillar Conclude Severe Service Truck Agreement

Navistar Will Leverage Intellectual Property, Technology for New Line of Vocational Trucks Launching in Early 2016

Company Will Continue to Manufacture Cat®-branded Severe Service Trucks Through 2016

LISLE, Ill., July 28, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- Navistar, Inc. today announced that it will launch a new line of premium vocational trucks for the severe service segment beginning in early-2016, leveraging shared technology and intellectual property from its venture with Caterpillar. In addition, the company announced that it will transition to Caterpillar the production and engineering of the Cat-branded severe service trucks the company has been supplying to Caterpillar since 2011. Navistar will continue to manufacture trucks for Caterpillar through December 31, 2016.

While specific terms of the transition will not be disclosed, both companies will have the opportunity to leverage certain joint intellectual property, collaborate with suppliers and utilize licensing agreements moving forward.

"Navistar and Caterpillar have had a strong, collaborative working relationship through a number of projects and partnerships for many, many years," said Bill Kozek, president, Navistar Truck and Parts. "This next phase provides Navistar with an exciting opportunity to introduce new technologies and product features into our new line of premium vocational trucks that we'll launch in 2016."

The company expects to provide additional details on its new premium vocational trucks in the months ahead.
